My carrings! My carrings Have fallen in the well, And what to say to Bawley-Alas, I can not tell!

He placed the trinkets in my cars; We kissed a fond farewell: But now they're lost forever— They're fallen down the well.

Those earrings, those earrings Were gifts of love to me: An emerald and a diamond Set in a golden sea.

Could I those waters penetrate, How gladly would I go And regain those omeruld carrings, The cause of all my woe.

Those earrings, those earrings
A tale of wee could tell,
But now they're in their cozy bed
In the bottom of the well.

I'm sure he'll never chide me When the truth to him I'll tell, And he'll love me just as fondly, Though the jewels are in the well. When the deep gives up its treasures
Those earring shall appear
As symbols of a plighted love
That loves beyond this sphere,

DIDN'T WANT TO BE AN ANGEL Objection of a Precoclous Youngster to

Going to Heaven. Lewiston (Me.) Journal. Here's a rather entertaining dialogue:

Time S p. m.; mother trying to make sleep overcome curiosity in a very young philosopher.

"Now, Georgie, go to sleep; that's a good boy."

"I ain't sleepy; so there."

"Good little boys that go to sleep early will go to heaven." "What's heaven?"

"What's heaven?"
"It's the beautiful place in the skies where God lives."
"Ain't they nobody lives with 'im?"
"Oh, yes—good people, little boys and girls who mind their mothers and girls who mind their mothers and angels."

"Nangels?" What's them?"

"Oh, they're grand beings who wear crowns and have wings"—

"Jos' like our biddies?"

"Something like them, and then,—

"Do they fly or do they jes' flop, flop when you shoo at 'em?"

"Oh, nobody ever shoos at them in Heaven, my dear—they are just like people, only they are larger and have wings."

Can they fly away up?"

"Oh, yes."
"Can they light on the teenty-tenty end of a limb and eat 'nagie worm, jes like a robin?"

"I don't know. Georgie." "Did you ever see a nangel?"

The boy looked at her reproachfully. "Muver, be you fibbin?" he asked stern-

"I guess so."
"Don't little nangels never have pants w'en they get's big's me?" (Georgie is wearing his first pair.)
"I don't believe they do."
"Huh, I wouldn't be a little nangel."
"Why, Georgie Smith?"
"Wouldn't." He turned away stubbornly. It was evidently definitely settled, heaven and, pants—or earth forever.

"You wear a wooden leg, Billie?" Old Billie sat in a sailors' saloon on the East Side yesterday afternoon, says the New York World. "That's what."

"That's what."

"Where did you get it?".

"In the West Indies, in '66—pirates."

"You love New York?"

"Depends. Say, this is the most wonderful wooden leg in the world."

"Looks as if it had seen service."

"Has. But that ain't it. All my old pals has carved their names on Billie's old wooden leg. See here. Jim Scott—he's dead these ten years; Jack Linn—Jack died in the African slave trade; Tom, Billie Bounce, Harry, Sam Post, Charlie Buzz, an' Old Grimes an' Hawksley an' Henshaw. All my old mates. Say, ain't that grand? I wouldn't sell this here old leg for a month's advance. It's the grandest thing in New York today.

Aside from the arrival of another consignment of gold from the other side of the ocean, and some announcements of reduction of rates in the west, there was nothing of a nature to sitr the street's sluggish stream of speculation today, and the stock market continued to drift into duliness, the volume being the samilest since the late activity began. There was another sport of activity and strength in the Vanderbilt stocks in the afternoon. These advances, however, were the only movements of Importance in the list among the usually active shares. The late trading saw considerable decline from the first prices, but the close was main firm though dual, and generally at close to the highest of the day.
